Consumers Offers City $425,000 For Generating System

Representatives of the Consumers Power Company at a meeting of the Grayling City Council last Thursday night made an offer of $425,000 for the city's power generating and distribution system. The offer included buying either the land on which the system is located or the system itself.

The offer, a page showing how the city's finances would be affected by the sale, was presented to the city council by the Consumers Power Company. The offer included buying either the land on which the system is located or the system itself.

The Council took the offer under advisement and another special meeting was set for Thursday, August 31st at the City Hall at 7:30 to consider the proposal. No provision is made under the city charter for such a sale of the city's power generating and distribution system.

It seemed to be the opinion that if such a sale were contemplated by the Council an advisory vote from the qualified electors of the City of Grayling would be asked before such a contract would be entered into.

The sale proposal by Consumers came about as the result of a study of the plant and system made last May on the invitation of the Council. Several other alternatives appear possible at this time and the Council expressed a desire that all voters be given the facts of each alternate proposal before they would be asked to express their opinion by an advisory vote.

Five separate provisions were offered by Mr. Hilly in presenting the offering price of $425,000. They were:

1. The City will retain title to the building in which the diesel generating units are now located. The Company to be given without rental or fees a year's time from date of purchase to remove the generating facilities.
2. The City will retain title to the land associated with the diesel generating building excepting a portion thereof for a sub-station site (or will provide a site at a suitable location elsewhere).
3. Offers of employment with the Company.

somewhere in our operating area will be given to the electric employees who can qualify with respect to health and ability.

Upon removal of the generating facilities the Company will clean up the building on a rough basis and repair any damages resulting from the removal of the facilities.

5. The City will retain accounts receivable as well as responsibility for payment of any debt associated with the electric facilities to the date of transfer of title and business.

In addition to this, Consumers proposes to spend approximately $83,000 in the first three years of operation in Grayling to rehabilitate the distribution system and to tie in their lines to a sub-station to be erected here if the sale were to become a reality. The tie-in in the first year would cost $15,000 with another $27,000 to be spent on the distribution system which would include replacing about 100 poles and associated equipment which is classified as poor, and fair to poor. The second year an additional $14,000 would be spent to replace 50 poles and related equipment which are now classified as fair to poor. Expansion for the third year would be $7,000 to replace 25 poles and equipment which are classified as fair.

37th Infantry Division Packs For Homeward Trip Saturday

CAMP GRAYLING — Ohio's 37th Infantry Division pulled out of the field today and began packing for its long trip to 84 homes in the Buckeye State.

The division will leave Camp Grayling Saturday morning.

The division moved into the field Monday. Live ammunition was used almost exclusively in the division tried to simulate the conditions to the greatest extent. One visitor remarked that the training is as real as you get without actually having a fight.

A cold rain dampened the annual review last Saturday but it did not dampen praise heaped upon the Buckeye citizen-soldiers.

William F. Schaub, assistant secretary of the Army, here to assist the division with the official Army flag, told the Ohioans: "The readiness of this division is probably higher than at any time in peace."

The history of this division reads much like the history of the Army.

Earlier, Maj. Gen. Rinaldo Van Brunt, deputy commander of the Second Army, told newsmen:

"They (members of the division) are real pros — calm, cool and deliberate in their duties. I was very impressed with the morale, the spirit and enthusiasm of the 37th."

The heavy sky Saturday canceled the meeting of three commanders of the 37th.

A plane carrying Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beigher, who guided the division during World War II; Maj. Gen. Leo M. Kreber, who held that post during the Korean conflict; and Maj. Gen. Errol H. Zistel, former chief of staff of the Ohio Air National Guard, had to return to Columbus after coming within five miles of Grayling.

Later the pilot said he was flying extremely low and still could not pick up any ground markers.

During the hour and a half long ceremonies Commanding General Loren G. Windom presented certificates of meritorious service to Brig. Gen. Howard F. Haines, 37th artillery commander, and Col. Leo Conway, senior Army advisor for the Ohio National Guard.

Gen. Haines, who has been with the division since 1958, retired at the end of the month.

In all, six generals were on the reviewing stand: Gen. Windom, Gen. Van Brunt, Maj. Gen. Clayton Korr, chief of the Army section National Guard Bureau to inspect and review the massed might of Ohio's 37th Infantry Division at Camp Grayling last Saturday morning.

On the reviewing stand were: William F. Schaub, assistant secretary of the Army, at the microphone; Maj. Gen. Rinaldo Van Brunt, Second Army deputy commander; Maj. Gen. Loren G. Windom, Division Commander; and Maj. Gen. Clayton Korr, chief of the army section National Guard Bureau to inspect and review the massed might of Ohio's 37th Infantry Division at Camp Grayling last Saturday morning.

All new dancers are invited to join the fun and no experience is necessary. Members are urged to come to the first dance. The group will dance once a month through May, and the new officers promise an active season of fun for everyone.

Mayor Visits Ohio Guard

CAMP GRAYLING, MICH. — Mayor Burton McWilliams, Robert M. Hayes, Manager of the Grayling Chamber of Commerce and Jack Aker, local Bank President were on hand last Thursday, August 17th, at Camp Grayling for an official call on the 37th Infantry Division, Ohio National Guard.

The visit was established to allow officials of the Guard and the City of Grayling to become better acquainted. This is the second year the 37th Division has trained at the spacious Grayling Reservation.

On hand to greet the city officials were Maj. Gen. Loren G. Windom, commanding general of the 37th and Adjutant General of Ohio; and Brig. Gen. Herbert B. Eagon, assistant commander and Director of Ohio's Dept. of National Resources. Both generals are cabinet members of Ohio's Governor, Michael V. DiSalle.

The group arrived for a reception at the commanding general's tent followed by lunch at the General's Mess. The 2 1/2 hour meeting was held in the mess.

Another luncheon between the Division and Grayling was held on Tuesday at the Shoppings Hotel. During the meeting Mayor McWilliams presented an award to SP4 Paul Slaughter, HQ Co. 537th Transportation Bn., who was selected by division officials as the winner of the annual "best information program" contest. The meeting was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

ing was also attended by other higher ranking officers of the division including Colonel William Morr, chief of staff of the division. City officials offered full cooperation with the Ohio National Guard in their annual two week stay in the area. It was also discussed that division officials were considering extending the training period for 1962 to three weeks. Plans are on the drafting board to bring a portion of the division (artillery) to Grayling one week earlier than the main body.

Following the meeting General Windom expressed appreciation to the group for the opportunity of meeting with city officials. He said: "We are very pleased to hold our training program on the large Grayling reservation. It offers us the facilities we need to adequately test all of our divisional units and to fire all our weapons. We sincerely appreciate the friendly attitude and cooperation of the people of Grayling and its City fathers."

Camp Grayling Trip Adds More Luster

As an added bonus for those taking the trip to Camp Grayling in northern Saskatchewan, there will be a drawing among the 18 men after they take off from Grayling on Sept. 2. The winner of this drawing will get a free trip and his money which he has already paid in will be refunded.

This holds true only if there is a full load of 18 men. There are still a couple of openings at a heart attack at the down river home, Wildwood, on the North Down River Road, about ten miles east of Grayling.

Mr. Lozen was born May 21, 1899, to Edward and Hattie Lozen at Mt. Clemens, Mich. Mr. Lozen and Mr. Martin Hall owned and operated the Palm Cafe in Mt. Clemens from 1932 until 1953, when Mr. Lozen purchased Mr. Hall's interest and operated the business himself until his retirement in October of 1957. He then moved to his summer home in Grayling as a permanent residence.

Besides his wife, Alice D., Mr. Lozen, best known to his friends, Mr. Cubby, is survived by two brothers, Asa Carl and Ignatius Lozen, and Mr. Clemens, and three sisters, Mrs. F. G. Grieger of Oak Harbor, Ohio, Mrs. William Jobes of Mt. Clemens, and Mrs. C. C. Lloyd of Ocean Springs, Miss.

Funeral services will be held Thursday, August 24th, at 10 a.m. at St. Mary's Church. Interment is to be in Elmwood Cemetery in Grayling.

Cliff was one of four people interviewed on Monday evening. Others were: Aubrey Snyder of Cheboygan, former assistant city manager and engineer of that city; Major H. R. The Mayor is a full time employee of the Michigan National Guard, being a construction engineer for the Guard and Theodore Wheeler of Lake Margrethe. Several others had written letters to apply for the position but did not arrive for the interview.

Balloting followed the interviews with three voters voting for Cliff and two for Clingensmith.

Cars and People

Automobiles affect different people different ways:

In Santa Monica, California, a driver was fined one dollar for over parking but was convinced F. C. Welsh the court he should only pay 48 cents. "The officer who slipped the ticket under my wiper broke it," he said, "and it cost me 52 cents to repair it."

In one of our larger cities undergoing the usual street alterations a motorist was fined recently for going the wrong way on a one-way street. Later that day he received a second ticket for going the opposite way on the same street. Naturally, in the meantime traffic was rerouted and the one-way signs were put up in the other direction.

In case you ever have to use this argument here's a case history: A late-registering motorist was driving home with his new license plates on the front seat of his car when he was ticketed for not having new plates on his car. The judge became so confused by the "on and off" arguments that he finally dismissed the case.

On the border of France and Switzerland recently some fleeing smugglers dumped a barrel of tacks on the road to delay pursuing custom men. The wary customs men drove around them but 47 motorists coming along later weren't so lucky and received flat tires.

Finally, there was a car purchaser who returned his recent purchase to a used car lot where he located the salesman who had sold him the week before. "Would you be kind enough to tell me about this car once more," he said, "I'm getting discouraged."

Driving Costs $2,274,000 A Year Locally

(Special to the Avalanche)

NEW YORK — Crawford County couples who are bound for the hinterlands on motor trips this summer will spend, if they are average, about $29 a day while on the trip, according to the American Automobile Association.

This is based on driving 300 miles a day. It includes $7 for car operation, $10.50 for meals and snacks, $9.50 for overnight lodgings and $2 for tolls and miscellaneous expenses.

But before the trip, the cautious driver will have his car checked over. And that is when he will get to wondering: "How much do I spend a year to run it?"

For most car owners that is a difficult question. It means combining all the variable-type expenditures, such as gas, oil and service charges, with the fixed costs, such as insurance, taxes and depreciation.

The AAA has come up with current facts and figures for the average car owner. It follows a survey of such costs in various parts of the country for a standard-size car in the popular-price field.

For normal operation at 10,000 miles a year, the cost is $607 in fixed charges—plus 3.06 cents a mile, a total of $1,203.

Applied to Crawford County and to the 1,890 passenger cars in use there, the annual expenditure locally is an estimated $2,274,000.

Every day throughout the year, whether a car is used or not, its owner incurs a bill for $2.21, the AAA reports. This is for depreciation, insurance and license fees.

The variable charges—for gas, oil, tires and maintenance—then enter the picture. They depend upon the amount of driving done.

The combined cost is 12 cents a mile at the 10,000-a-year rate. Those who go 20,000 miles pay relatively less. Because the fixed charges stay the same, the cost drops to 6.1 cents a mile.

Operation at 5,000 miles a year, however, is much more expensive.

Guarantee Of Quality . . .

Early this June the New York Times carried a dispatch which said: "Communist China has become brand-conscious, with newspapers supporting the trend in an effort to improve the quality of consumer products."

China is thus taking a worthwhile leaf from the capitalist book. A well-known trademark is one of the guarantees of quality. If the producer doesn't assure up to his claims, the customers soon turn to competitive brands, and he's out of business.

Oddly enough, however, an effort is underway in this country to undermine trademark names in the vital field of prescription drugs. Should this idea be adopted, the prescribing physician would write his prescription using only the generic or general name of the drug, would not use the trademark name.

The dangers in this are evident. Such a system of "anonymous" would allow drugs of varying quality to be dispensed. Moreover, it has always been a basic assumption of our American free enterprise system that a man has a right to be rewarded for a superior product that results in a better product. This has had much to do with the advent of new medicines that have greatly reduced illness and prolonged life.

If trademark rights are impaired, the drug industry will lose much of its incentive for research — and the public will lose a guarantee of quality.

'T'WAS LOVE AND DUTY

There are good signs — one being an increase in buying by industry for stockpiling purposes. However, there is a belief that inventories have about reached their peak, because businessmen are trying hard to keep stock and sales in closer balance than in past times.

Increased government spending is also expected to give business a lift. "But," says Time, "if the 1961 recovery is to be brisk, something more is needed. For that extra thrust, economists are looking hopefully toward the free-spending American consumer."

In other words, the state of business, and the state of the economy as a whole, will depend to a major extent on retail sales — the sales made to individuals and families. Our superb system of mass production would be impotent without an equally superb system of mass distribution to move the goods into the hands of the people who want them, will buy them, will consume them and buy more.

Retailers, for the most obvious of reasons, will do their utmost to increase consumer buying. Their measure of success will largely determine the degree of prosperity we will enjoy.

Time Summer Succumb

Peabody, 70, a retired valuation officer, died Sunday, at 8, of a heart attack, at his home in Grayling. Mr.
Peabody was a summer resident in a county for many years. A resident of Grosse Ile, he had spent the summer in Crawford County and the winter in Florida since he retired in 1953. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, a number of grandchildren,
and in the Detroit area.
He was well known and loved and Grayling. He was an hunter and fisherman and the out-of-doors. He spent happy summers camping in Grayling area, along the shore and on the lakes of this county. However, his interest was in people.
He often seen fixing a toy or a yard for small-try, giving out to teenagers on gunning or game stalking; swap-pales and reminiscing with others. Because he was a to all, he leaves a great friend who mourn his loss.

Mr. Peabody was buried at Trenton, Michigan, on August 11.
Southern Michigan Conservation Officers served as pall bearers and Honor Guard.
Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wright and Tom attended from Grayling.

"You know, I never thought much about it until now," the man said, speaking between sips and pauses, almost between every word, to move his lips in an expression of delight over the off-season treat that was his fare this warm summer evening.

On the plate before him a brace of plump, well-browned Bob White were artistically surrounded by gravy-topped wedges of hard toast.

"Yes, sir," he continued, holding up a leg bone for careful appraisal, "I topped this hill... must have been doing about 55... and there I was, right smack in the middle of them. Never had a chance. In fact, I didn't see them until it was all over."

He paused, thoughtfully, and took a long drink of tea. "But, you know, I took to noticing things after that and it's pure carnage on the highways. Why, I saw rabbits by the dozens, had to slow down to keep from running over a couple myself. And 'possums, squirrels, cardinals, mockingbirds and robins. And domesticated animals—dogs and cats, especially cats... boy... cats really catch it on the highways."

All that remained of one quail were a few bones and the other bird was fast disappearing. "Yessir... we drive down the highways every day and we don't notice these things. I don't. Never paid any attention before, until I ran into these quail. Then I got to noticing the dead animals and birds along the highways and I was really surprised. Ever take notice on any of your trips?"

Without waiting for an answer, he pushed the plate away and reached for a cigar. "Now, that was a meal fit for a king. Just wish that those birds hadn't been crossing the highway to get to Lant... and at the wrong time."

"Michigan Marching Forward," this year's theme of Michigan Week (held May 21-27. It would also make a fitting title for the story of conservation in this state during the past 40 years. Although there have been setbacks and tough leading since the Conservation Department and Commission were formed in 1921, the net result of these four decades has been marked progress in the management and enjoyment of Michigan's natural resources. Progress has come in many forms through many different avenues. Advances have been made by changing approaches in some areas. The old practice of collecting and renting huge numbers of small bluegills and perch "to improve fishing" has been scrapped in favor of such measures as seeding and treatment of lakes to weed out undesirable fish. Far-sighted forestry practices and giant strides in forest fire control have led millions of burned-over, cut-over acres back to growing, productive forests. Pheasants reared on the Department's Mason state game farm and released in the wild during the early years "hatched" a sport which yields more than 1,000,000 ringnecks to hunters each fall. The pictures above provide, of course, but a glimpse of conservation's forward march during the last 40 years.

LANSING — Fishing and hunting apiently a new growing forest — toughened control of forest fires — public holdings of one-sixth of the state — a top-notch parks system — rising use of minerals — a people aware of its resource state.

These are some of the hard-won achievements drawn from forty years of tough sledding, setbacks, and finally, a most after mil-post on the long road to sound conservation in Michigan.

They told a colorful story of "Michigan Marching Forward,"
this year's theme of Michigan Week May 21-27.

Progress has come in many forms through many different avenues since 1921 when the Conservation Department and Commission were formed to chart the course of the state's conservation movement.

In some areas, progress has blossomed from the seed of new ideas. Sometimes it has come from scrapping old practices for new ones which were sweated out by trial and error. And in some cases, advances have been made by stepping up the cadence of established programs.

Whatever the path followed, the net result has been a greater enjoyment of Michigan's natural resources during the past four decades. And greater benefits, too.

Despite a growing human population which has placed seemingly tremendous pressure on the state's wildlife resources, Michigan can proudly boast of fishing and hunting apiently for all.

Much has been done to provide Michigan hunters and fishermen with places to enjoy their favorite sport. Since 1939, the Department has acquired some 770 public fishing sites which are vitally important to thousands of angler who would otherwise have no way to get onto a lake or stream.

Also dating back to the late 1930's is another forward-looking program which has brought some 201,000 acres into public ownership at 60 state game areas in southern Michigan where places to hunt are becoming more and more scarce.

In 1921, Michigan's deer herd was just starting to pull out of a population nosedive. Some 28,000 deer hunters took to the woods that fall and most of them came home empty-handed. Last fall, the season didn't measure up to recent years, yet an estimated 80,000 deer were harvested.

Game men were in the midst of an experiment to introduce pheasants as game birds in this state when the Department came into being. Thousands of birds were raised at the Mason state game farm and released in the wild.
The progress report: more than 1,000,000 ringnecks are bagged each fall in this state.

Fisheries work has come a long way over the last 40 years. With research showing the way, the old practice of collecting and renting huge numbers of small bluegills and perch "to improve fishing" has been left by the wayside in favor of such measures as seeding and treating over-crowded lakes to remove undesirable fish.

In another sound step to manage fish-as a crop, research has led to liberalized size and catch limits and longer seasons.

In the 1930's the Civilian Conservation Corps began various shore-mending projects. This type of work has been continued as an important part of the Department's present stream-improvement program.

A new growing forest has replaced the millions of barren acres that sprawled out to Michigan's horizons after the big timber was cut. Favoring the way for this comeback have been far-sighted forestry practices and a hard-hitting forest fire control system which is second to none.

Today, Michigan's Michigan-owned forests are managed on a sound-business basis and after products generate millions of dollars within the state's economy each year.

question it might seem, and especially important because of the coming Constitutional Convention which can control this power.

Lawmakers frequently complain that they have no real power over day-to-day operations of state government, except through their function of budgeting. There is some merit to this statement, and those who would argue that things are as they should be.

Loss of power from legislative control develops in several ways, some of which the Legislature can reverse if it chooses. However, amendment to the Constitution by referendum limits legislative control and nothing can be done about it except by another public vote.

The 3% sales tax, for example, was set by public vote and had to be changed the same way. Earmarking of funds by constitutional action leaves legislators' hands tied.

The Civil Service Commission, also voted into the Constitution, permits a group of commissioners to raise pay of state employees with no regard for legislative approval. The Legislature can, however, refuse to allocate additional money, a situation which forces each state department to cut the number of employees or make ends meet in some other fashion.

Some power loss results from legislative action. When boards and commissions are created by their action to govern certain aspects of state government, authority goes with it.

There are oodles of these commissions, controlled for the most part by commission members appointed by the Governor with approval of the Senate. Included among the most important are Conservation, Economic Development, Fair Employment Practices, and commissions dealing with various segments of health such as nursing, optometrists, etc.

Other power loss results from "earmarking" of funds. When a law says that money from a certain source shall be spent for a certain purpose, it can be spent in no other way. If conditions change so that this money is needed for some other purpose, the Legislature is hamstringing.

Absence of some powers is certainly desirable. The Constitution should prevent abuse of legislative power, as well as abuse from the executive or judicial branches of government. Such limitation involves the rights of individual citizens. Other provisions should prevent the various branches of government from acting in areas rightfully belonging to another branch—license, and possibly some other kind of hunting permit.

SOME VERY FINE hair-splitting in the interpretation of a federal law threatened to cost Michigan money, so the state went to court recently and won some $810,000.

The action, in which Michigan was joined by Minnesota, Wisconsin and Colorado, forced the U. S. Department of the Interior to return to its old ways of computing eligibility for a type of federal grant used for game and wildlife management projects.

The money is in the so-called Pittman-Robertson fund and there might be a considerably bigger saving for Michigan in the long run.

The Pittman-Robertson Act has been on the books since 1937, but in 1959, the Interior Department upset what had been a smoothly running program.

Funds under the plan are handed out on a formula basis. The number of hunting licenses sold in a state is the key to how much money it gets.

In 1959 the department changed to a formula based on the number of persons buying licenses.

This meant that the state could collect only once for a person who bought a deer license, a small game license, and possibly some other kind of hunting permit.

The states went to court because they said the number of licenses sold, not just the number of persons buying them, was the best indication of how much hunting was done in each state.

Total sum which the four states collected was more than $1.3 million. The federal government could appeal, there was no indication it would.
